

去殖民化

Some continue to invest in the exploitation of land and labor, robbing our children of a sustainable future.

Some moms are filling a void with brunches, shopping sprees and retreats while their tax dollars fund weapons abroad, tearing "other" children into pieces.

Some moms pretend to not know that children are being used as bait to capture and detain their immigrant parents.

Some never taught their children that we live on stolen land, built by stolen hands, so that they may navigate the world more responsibly.

Some moms give money to charity to soften their guilt. Some send lots of thoughts and prayers into the void with no introspection or action.

妈妈

Some continue to harm women and children by supporting anti-abortion policies without addressing health or social issues.

Some moms use their privilege to shield their children from comprehending that our government has rounded up humans based on ethnic origin and forced them into concentration camps.

Many generations were taught that the only way to be a mom is in a nuclear family, to obey and to uphold a system rooted in imperialist, white supremacist, capitalist heteropatriarchy.

狗屎!

The fact is, throughout history, there have always been moms who resisted with radically expansive love, who refused to fit inside a box, become numb or hollow. Their stories were often erased because those who control the narratives are afraid of these trouble-makers and truth holders.

去殖民化

Some still believe and teach their children that black and brown people are inferior simply by their silence inside a discriminatory and violent system.

Some moms lived in Sundown Towns and didn't know it.

Some moms hosted parties, baked cookies and cuddled their children while other humans were humiliated under Jim Crow, which taught the harmful lie that legality = morality.

I now know many nurturers who are leaning in, embracing the discomfort of unlearning, naming the harm, and decolonizing. I absolutely love these beautiful bitches who are living unapologetically. I hope to connect with many more along the way. I hope it's you.

We WILL restore humanity and birth a new world together.

妈妈

Some moms took their children to watch public lynchings of black bodies as a pastime.

Some separated indigenous families and forced their colonial language and religion on stolen children in residential schools.

Moms have always been there throughout history.
